Local Public Health Recognition Award

In 2016, Isanti County Public Health began awarding certificates of recognition to individuals and community groups responsible for significant accomplishments in public health. It is expected that Isanti County Public Health will continue this tradition by awarding up to 3 groups and/or individuals consisting of up to 15 individuals each year during National Public Health Week, which is the first full week of April.

Selection Criteria

The Local Public Health Recognition Award was created to recognize individuals and groups who have worked toward achieving excellence in public health in the previous calendar year. Potential recipients should be able to show an example of an accomplishment in public health during the previous calendar year. The decisions on whom to recognize should be a consensus between the Public Health Department's Planner, Health Educator, Nursing Supervisor, and Director.
